“This is part of an ongoing effort to provide county services as efficiently as possible with the resources that we have available,” said Paul Hahn, Municipal Services Agency Administrator. “We know that our service centers have been well received by the public, and our goal is to continue providing our customers information and access to a wide variety of County services without having to come downtown.”

Visitors to the Service Center can purchase animal licenses and annual parks passes, view and pay property and utility bills, get building permits, discuss traffic and code enforcement neighborhood issues, and access clerk-recorder services.
